Human Resources & Personal Data Policy

Adopted by CFO

2 July, 2018

1. General

Personal data is something related to individuals, which is strongly connected to all HR areas. We need to be aware of how we handle personal data in all steps and processes, including recruitments, employments, changes during the employment and upon termination of employment – basically the whole cycle. All kind of data that can relate to individuals (personal number, name, gender, family members etc.) is and need to be handled as personal data.

This handbook describes the handling within three areas as well as collection, processing, storage and deletion in all areas:

- Recruitment
- Employment
- Terminated employment

We always need to relate to" if we need the data and information" in all matters when it comes to IF we need to save all kind of personal data – if not, there is no reason to store/save data. If the answer is no, to the question: is there a reason saving this info – the data should be deleted and not be saved what so ever. Don´t save/keep emails consisting of personal data in your inbox. If there is no purpose or legal basis saving data – make sure this is deleted.

In general, we need to inform applicants, employees etc. the purpose of why we saving the personal data related to the person. The legal basis needs to be stated.

It is our responsibility to make sure personal data is up to date. Therefore, we should ask employees frequently if their personal data is correct and up to date. Once per year this should be updated, and it is each manager's responsibility to make sure we are compliant.

2. Recruitment

2.1 Information to applicants

Inform applicants when receiving their application. The applicant should be informed how we store and manage their application. Inform applicants in the job ad, that no references are needed in this stage. Remember that references are personal data, and if we receive this information – the hiring manager needs to inform references that we have their personal details/contact information.

2.2 Delete and appeal

When the recruitment process is closed, make sure all CV´s and other documents are deleted – both digital and paper wise. If any of the material is printed it has to be stored in a safe place and when not needed anymore be sorted in the destruction bin for privacy material. No material with personal data is to be stored in a binder.

The applicant should "mark in a box" when applying to vacancy´s, and give confirmation in sharing the CV and other documents. There the applicant is informed how we handle personal data and the recruitment selection.

2.3 How we handle CV and other documents

CV´s and all documents related to recruitments should only be handled of the hiring manager. If hiring managers for any reason would like to keep/save the CV for future vacancy's, the manager needs to have the approval from the applicant.

If any of the material is printed it has to be stored in a safe place and when not needed anymore be sorted in the destruction bin for privacy material. No material with personal data is to be stored in a binder.

Sensitive personal data such as personal identification number or equivalent, sick leave data, religion etc. included in CVs, employment agreements or payroll files must not be sent by email. It must be handled by either document sharing or encrypted emails.

When receiving spontaneous applications – make sure we have the candidate's approval for saving the data.

3. Employment

3.1 Employment contract and information to the employee

Information we gather and save is information that "we really need" to perform our work duties and/or fulfill employment agreement and/or local labor laws and/or local tax legislation. There must be a clearly stated purpose for collecting and handling personal data and it may not be used for anything else than the defined purpose. The employment agreement is signed in two copies, and the copy Tradedoubler keep needs to be saved in a locked cabinet. It should only be Country Manager/Department Manager and local HR where available who have access to original employee contracts and additional agreement. When additional agreements which includes personal data (ACE, Bonus agreements, performance appraisals etc.) are signed, this needs to be kept in locked cabinet. All digital copies are sent to local HR by encrypted emails, centrally, and kept at local HR system/server with limited access to local and central HR.

Information how we save and gather personal data needs to be shared to the employee.

All templates that the employees fill in is only including data that is related to employment only.

When we collect and save personal data related to in case of emergency details – this needs to be informed to the person who the employee named as the in case of emergency contact by local HR where available and Office Manager for other markets.

Make sure we cover which personal data we collect and save and for what purpose, in the employment agreement.

3.2 Information by email

When employment information needs to be shared by email, this email needs to be within an encrypted email. Only necessary information is shared by email, as for example information related to new hires, sick leaves, performance, change of manager, salary, resignations, terminations, labor law or similar.

4. Terminated employment

4.1 Deleting policy

In general, all information that is not needed or shared with local HR should be deleted in destruction bins. All documents and personal data to employees should be reviewed every six months and if not longer needed for HR management purposes to be deleted.

5. Retention period

In general, personal data related to applicants, employees or former employees should be deleted if there is no labor law or tax legislation purposes. To make sure we only have the needed personal data, retention reviews are done every six months by manager and local and central HR.

6. Compliance
